

Musings...

By John Henry Cutler

Andrew Young, the unguided missile, was fired as UN Ambassador partly because he lied. This recalls Mark Twain's definition "A diplomat is an honest man sent abroad to lie for his country."

I promise to vote for Ted Kennedy if he promises not to run.

Loaded dice were found in the ruins of Pompeii.

Clemenceau said, "War is too important to leave to the generals." Also: "Not to be a socialist at 20 shows want of heart; to be one at 30 shows want of head."

When Irving Cobb heard than an editor (Chapin) was ill, he said, "I trust it's nothing trivial." He lost a wager when he bet Will Rogers he couldn't make President Calvin Coolidge smile. Will turned the trick by saying, as he was introduced to the President, "Pardon me, I didn't get the name."

Joggers, like bicyclists, should keep to the right in the direction of traffic. Mopedists? Maybe they should keep out of sight.

He said it was hereditary in his family to have no children. That's an Irish Bull.

Those drooping Gaillardia in our garden with their pulled down sombreros, look like dejected Mexicans.

Casanova, the great lover, had a big nose, thick lips, protruding teeth, pop eyes and flat feet.

President Franklin Delano Roosevelt was having a conference on an American battleship with the chief of staff of the Army and chief of naval operations, when, during a practice maneuver, a destroyer escort accidentally fired a torpedo at the battleship. Admiral King was furious even when it missed.

The month of August is my first anniversary with the shop. I want to thank all of my customers who have made it a very successful year.
